GRI CERTIFIED TRAINING ON SUSTAINABILITY REPORTING

Sustainability has evolved at the centre-stage of all the strategic decisions taken by the organisations and their stakeholders today. The idea of integrating strategic sustainability-related information with other material financial information signifies positive development. The ideology that the long-term profitability should come along with social justice and environment protection is gaining momentum. In the given context, sustainability disclosures help to reflect the organisation's approach and impacts created across the value chain. Establishing a process to generate sustainability information is integral to the preparation of sustainability report. Expertise to establish the process as well as ability to write the content of the report can determine the quality of the disclosure leading to shared value for the organisations and their stakeholders.

GRI (Global Reporting Initiative) has fast becoming the global de-facto standard in sustainability reporting. The aim of the GRI Certified Trainings on Sustainability Reporting is to build capacity of the participants on the reporting process and framework based on GRI G4 guidelines.

The CII-ITC Centre of Excellence for Sustainable Development offers following GRI certified training program:
